

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

TO THE MEMBERS.

THE salutary influence of well directed literary pursuits on the mind and heart of man, and more especially of youth, is too well attested by the experience of the past, to require any comment in favor of its importance. Institutions founded by a discriminating zeal for mental improvement, have, in every age, received the encouragement of the thinking and virtuous classes of the community, and been productive of solid advantages to society. But particularly when they emanate from the ardour of youthful ambition in this praise-worthy cause, they reflect transcendent honour on their authors, and prefer the most forcible appeals to public patronage. In the incipient stages of their existence, the incredulous and the wary may perhaps question the ability of young men to organize, upon efficient principles, an institution which is to boast of any useful results, or lay claim to any permanency of character. But the lapse of time, in removing doubts and suspicions of this nature, insures success, and affords the strongest and most incontrovertible evidence of their present and future usefulness.

Appreciating these remarks, as a fair exposition of public opinion, the Directors of the New-York Mercantile Library enjoy the most gratifying sensations of pride and hope, in now presenting to their fellow members a summary view of the flourishing condition, and future prospects of their Association. Years have passed by since its first establishment, and have successively witnessed its numbers augmenting, and its prosperity increasing. To us and to those clerks, whom a due consideration of the subject will hereafter enrol among our number, it presents privileges of inestimable value. When our daily business is concluded, the youthful mind, fatigued by the toilsome labours of the counting-house, naturally seeks relaxation in the variety of its pursuits ; for inactive repose affords no relief to its irrepressible energies. Pleasures and amusements, which at best but beguile the passing hour, and oftentimes allure to more dangerous indulgences, then present themselves under the most seductive forms. In yielding to their fascinations, evil habits are contracted, which the monitions of our own hearts are unavailing to check, nor the wisdom of more matured experience to reform.

The original object of the New-York Mercantile Library was, to substitute, in lieu of such pleasures, enjoyments of a more useful and exalted character. The zeal with which this object has been pursued, and the success which has rewarded it, redound to the credit of every member of the institution. Our library is now enriched by the possession of upwards of two thousand volumes, comprising not only the productions of the most eminent authors on the arts, sciences, and the various branches of solid learning, but also the most approved works of fancy and polite literature. To this valuable treasury of intellectual wealth, daily additions are made from the funds of the society, and by generous donations.

Since our annual meeting, held in December last, public attention has been more particularly directed towards this institution. During the short period intervening, upwards of 700 volumes have been added to its shelves, in different departments of literature, and more than 150 clerks have become members of this Association.

Our indebtedness to many respectable and commercial gentlemen, who have yielded to us their countenance and sustained us by their liberality, is cheerfully acknowledged, and repaid with heart-felt gratitude; and a sanguine anticipation is indulged in, that the location of our Library will shortly be altered by a removal to some public building in a more business part of the city. Such a situation would not only add dignity and increased reputation to this institution, but would also supply to merchants and foreigners an important accommodation in the many emergencies occurring in business transactions, where an immediate reference to works on mercantile law, maps, charts, or miscellaneous subjects, becomes desirable. All periodical publications of value are subscribed for, and laid on the table of our Reading Room, which is at all times open and accessible to members and visitors.

These views cannot be deemed visionary, if our fellow members be actuated by a proper spirit. But for such purposes, it is necessary that we should duly estimate the commercial honour of our city, and dearly cherish the professional character which we are preparing to assume. It is essential that we should not content ourselves merely with profiting by the advantages to be derived from this society, but that we should also seek, with an enterprising zeal, to extend its invaluable privileges to others.

To such benevolent offices the benign spirit of philanthropy prompts us; and if we are unmindful of her injunctions, we do not discharge the duties which, as citizens, we owe our country. To her mercantile opulence, and her brilliant commercial reputation, the news of her strength and the resources of her prosperity, that country is indebted for the perpetuity her freedom and her fame. If, therefore, we confine our speculations to the selfish policy of personal emolument only, we are not entitled to the appellation of liberal and patriotic merchants. That honourable name must be founded on our usefulness to society, by contributing to individual happiness and promoting the public weal. Our instrumentality in such a cause, accompanied with the grateful consciousness of having done our duty, will make in after life, the retrospect of the past pregnant with the most delightful recollections.

And how can such an object be better effected than by the exertion of our talents and our influence in diffusing a taste for pursuits which rectify the heart ; inspire the soul with elevated sentiments, and by enlarging the faculties of our minds, augment our means of usefulness, and multiply the sources of our enjoyments ? pursuits which, in every stage of our existence, recommend themselves to our attention ; in the private circles of friendship and of home, by giving to our social intercourse the charm of intelligence, and in the active duties of public life, by imparting a character of integrity to all our transactions.

By order of the Board,

B. J. SEWARD, President.

A. P. UFFORD, Secretary.
